When Superstorm Sandy devastated the East Coast it was a wake up call to a new reality. Shored Up takes us to the heart of this climate change controversy, following communities in NJ and NC where politics, economics and science collide. As the oceans rise and storms flood our towns and cities, do we ignore nature, or do we allow science to guide our policies for the future...before it's too late.

Screenings are free & open to the public
Limited number of seats available & RSVPs are required.
More information will be available at www.ces.fau.edu/SLR2013.

These events are co-sponsored by the 2013 Sea Level Rise Summit: Resiliency in the Face of Change

For directions and parking information to the Tuesday event please visit the Museum of Art's website at: www.moafll.org. The Friday screening will be held in the Velocity Center of the First Baptist Church Center and free parking is available on the north side of the building on NE 1st Ave. (www.firstfortlauderdale.com)
